Thanks Keith. I've prepared the attached declaration that notes that your client conducted a good-faith search for billing information but no longer retains records for the individual identified by my client. This would resolve our request for documents and for a deposition. Please let me know if you have any issues or concerns with the attached.

Best,
Matthew

Hi Matt –

Yea, so there is nothing showing anything related to any outstanding balance or anything of that nature. Basically nothing in their files related to what was billed but definitely can tell that nothing was paid.

Thanks, that is helpful. I know you previously referenced that “there may be billing records but my client may have not have ever gotten authorization for the billing, so there was no payment”—is there anything showing an amount owed or anything outstanding? Or is there just nothing financial/billing related at all that is maintained by your client?

Hi Matt –

I confirmed this morning that there was absolutely no billing directly to the client. There were no payments made by the insurer. There may be invoicing to the insurer but it is with a former billing company and my client no longer has a relationship with them.

Just to confirm, they do not have invoices, account statements, records of payments received for treatment, or anything like that?

Just talked to them. There are no billing records for that guy. Do you want them to see anything else exists?

If I am understanding it correctly, it sounds like there may be billing records but my client may have not have ever gotten authorization for the billing, so there was no payment. Hope to know more soon.
